DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 18 July 2006 has been entered.

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The claimed invention is concerned with 1) an elastomeric sealant material directly contacting one or more planar surfaces of a fuel cell stack, and completely surrounding protrusion extending outwardly from cooler plates disposed between fuel cells in the fuel cell stack and extending between each protrusion, the elastomeric sealant material extending on either side the protrusions sufficiently to form a sealing surface; and a manifold structure contacting the sealant material and defining coolant manifolds, and 2) a sealant surface directly contacting a fuel cell stack, and a manifold structure secured to the sealant material and forming with the sealant surface a coolant manifold and/or forming with the sealant surface a reactant gas manifold.

In contrast, Kumata et al., disclose a sealing means formed by applying a sealant into the clearance between the holes of the process air manifolds and the projecting portions of the cooling plate which project into the holes (col. 5: 39-61). Further, Kumata et al. disclose an integrally formed sealing plate that forms a front wall of the process air manifold. The sealing plate serves as a sealing element between the process air manifold and cooling air manifold (col. 6: 5-40).

Accordingly, the prior art references of record, and in particular, Kumata et al. are not concerned with directly contacting an elastomeric sealant material to the fuel cell stack, and further securing a manifold structure to the sealant.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
